I'm watching a Good Eats so old that Brother Alton has hair and his mixer has no flame decals.

This looks like a good idea.

...

This.

...

Little guy's not bad.

Gotta teach RHex to smear.

That's what I need to do. Start from the beginning.

Do you think his advice would prevent me from mixing up "red wine" and "red wine vinegar" ever again?

I would think that taking a swig would manage that in one.

not that I've used red wine vinegar much, but...don't they smell different? :)

I must have had a cold. And I didn't know we had red wine vinegar. And I poured it into a roaster with the chicken and tossed it in the oven, then left the room.

(I don't drink red wines, so the only stuff in the house is cheap cooking wine, stored on the same shelf as liquid smoke and worcester sauce)

There was a time before the flame decals? is shocked

I've had fun watching the ones in a completely different kitchen.

(many thanks to likethehat on YouTube)

I hear there's a GE drinking game. "Multi-tasker" -small drink. "Pinch of salt" -medium drink. And so on.

I prefer the Alton Brown snacking game.

(What do you get for "golden brown and delicious?")

mmm. snacks. much (munch?) better.

I think for a "golden brown and delicious" you'd need to do the Snoopy dance.

O.o

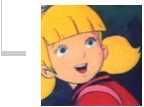

(I put bats on my stand mixer.)

Unrelated comment, but I saw this and thought "goat parkour!", which made me think of you. So:
